

A look back

The Editor,

With the impending State Election, it's interesting to for me to look back and review the campaign for Flinders.

As a local, I feel that I know the electorate well. Over the past 18 months it has been my pleasure to come to know our people and communities even better.

At the time I became a candidate for Flinders, I listed water security, regional infrastructure, country health services and education as the primary issues.

Interestingly, nothing has changed – they are still the most discussed and important issues here on Eyre Peninsula. Add to that – marine parks, daylight saving, and mining (and the export of), and we have most things covered.

What has been reinforced to me time and time again as I've travelled the electorate is how passionate we are about our hospitals, schools and communities.

I believe that under a Redmond Liberal Government, we have a real opportunity to make things better here in South Australia – and I want Flinders to be a part of that change. It has been my absolute privilege to be a candidate for our local electorate.

If elected as the next Member for Flinders in the South Australian Parliament, I will give my best to represent and fight for the future prosperity of the Eyre Peninsula.

Yours sincerely,

Peter Treloar

Liberal Candidate for Flinders
